Verna Gates

Verna Gates reports for the world's largest news organization, Reuters International News Service and the most respected news source, TIME Magazine. Her career began as one of the original 30 employees of CNN who worked to launch the network. She worked for CNN as a writer/producer for four years. A freelance journalist, she writes for a number of national, regional and state publications. Many national and international writing awards hang on her office walls.

Verna also founded Fresh Air Family (www.freshairfamily.org), a state-wide organization dedicated to outdoor education. She also studies Alabama wildflowers and teaches ethnobotany as a visiting professor at Miles College. As a plant lore expert, she has appeared on NBC NightSide, National Public Radio in Canada, Voice of America, Pulse of the Planet, FOX 6 News and many more. For her conservation work, she has been named Alabama Conservationist of the Year by the Alabama Environmental Council, an Alabama Treasure by the Huntsville Times, and One of Alabama's Unforgettable Faces by the Alabama Bureau of Tourism.
